Bladder Cancer Awareness Month is coming: here's how you can help

Bladder Cancer Awareness Month is just a day away. Whether you're a patient, a loved one, or a health professional, help us raise awareness of a disease that affects over 20,000 people in the UK each year – yet whose symptoms are often not recognised for what they are, by the public or even by health professionals.

There are so many ways you can get involved – from fundraising to raising awareness in your network.

Host an information event

Set up an information stand in your hospital, workplace or community to help others learn the symptoms of bladder cancer and why early diagnosis matters.

Share on social media or your website/intranet

We've made it easy with a range of downloadable graphics, social media posts, and ready-to-use web content.

Fundraise

Organise a bake sale, dress-down day, walk, or other event to raise vital funds for our work supporting patients and pushing for better treatments. Take a look at our suggestions.

We've got you covered:

To help you spread the word, we'll provide free resources and materials including:

- Posters and leaflets about symptoms and treatments for download or in print.
- Social media graphics and suggested posts
- Pens, lanyards, badges and more.
- Symptom guides tailored for the public or professionals.

We'll support you with everything you need to make your event or campaign a success.

Let's turn May into a month of action.

Together, we can make more people aware, get them diagnosed earlier, and ensure no one faces bladder cancer alone.
